

IMPORTANT SAFETY NOTICE

Recall to Repair Certain Free-Standing and Slide-In Ranges Sold Under GE and Other Brand Names

Hazard: The ranges can tip over when a heavy object is placed on an open oven door and the anti-tip-over bracket is not secured to the wall or floor, posing a tip over injury and risk of burn injuries from hot food or liquids in cookware.

Recalled Product: This recall involves free-standing and slide-in ranges manufactured between May and June 2021 and sold by GE Appliances, a Haier company (GEA). The units come in white, black and other finish colors. The model number is located on the oven frame, visible after opening the oven door or drawer. Only units with the attached model and serial numbers are included in the recall.

Remedy: Consumers should contact GEA to schedule a free in-home repair. Consumers should not return the recalled ranges to retailers, who are not prepared to take the units back. To determine if your range is affected and schedule a free repair, visit:
